Hospital for Special Surgery Children's Pavilion

SubenDougherty is the architect for the new Children's Pavilion at the Hospital for Special Surgery on New York's upper east side. Rated the number one orthopedic hospital in the country, the 35,000 square foot Children's Pavilion will be the only center of excellence for the care of children with orthopedic and rheumatic disorders in the New York tri-state region.

The expertise and nurturing care of the multidisciplinary pediatric team at HSS sets it far above other pediatric healthcare facilities; now the engaging, and totally unique design of this family-centered environment will further enhance the patient and parent experience. An abstract nature motif carries throughout the Pavilion, appealing to all age groups, with the key centerpiece being a 9 foot high by 30 foot wide virtual aquarium. A series of LED light features, with programmable imagery and soothing changeable color light sources, will allow the design to continue to engage even those patients who visit the pavilion on a regular basis.

Construction has just kicked-off for the rehabilitation center portion of the project. With sweeping views of the East River and multiple state-of-the-art gyms for the children, this stand-alone facility will be open in 2011. The entire facility will be complete by the end of 2012.
